Take the iWay Data-Quality Challenge

Detailed profile reports provide insight into your data.

What Shape Is Your Corporate Information Really In?

Like many companies, you know you've got data-quality problems somewhere in your organization, but have no idea how to look for, identify, and correct them. That's because invalid, inconsistent, or outdated information often exists deep within detailed data sets, transactional records, or Web submissions. This makes it hard to find bad data before it corrupts your systems and negatively impacts your critical business processes.

The iWay Data-Quality Challenge

With the iWay Data-Quality Challenge, you can uncover data-quality issues across your business – at no risk or cost to your company.

Here's how it works: send us an extract of your detail data via our secure FTP site and we'll use our powerful data-profiling and quality-management tools to assess its integrity. You can also have our consultants come to your site to analyze and profile random samplings of your corporate information.

- Data samples must be sent as Excel or CSV files
- Records must include transactional or detail data, with no aggregations or summary formulas
- Files can include no more than 15 data fields

The entire assessment will take one week. When our analysis is complete, you'll receive an in-depth report that provides accurate statistics about the quality of the information that's used to make important strategic business decisions across your organization each day.

You'll gain full insight into the viability of the information you rely on to drive business performance. You'll better understand where the biggest threats exist and the extent of the issues they can cause if not rectified.
